CHINA'S MYSTERY MAN

Gen. Ho Chien May Visit Colony.

CANTON PARLEYS CLOSE

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Canton, To-day.
General Ho Chien, the "mystery man," is due to leave here this morning for the North, either by the passenger monoplane of the Eurasia Aviation Corporation or by train to Hong Kong, en route to Shanghai.

As Chairman of the Hunan Provincial Government and commanding officer of the provincial forces, General Ho Chien holds the balance of power between the Central Authorities and the South-West provinces. Hunan had been the cockpit in past civil wars between the North and South.

Therefore General Ho Chien wants to find out what is going on here, so that he may know what to do in case Canton and Nanking come to open dispute. On the other hand, Nanking press reports claim that General Ho has reached an understanding on behalf of the National Government with the Kwangtung and Kwangsi military leaders on a future campaign against the Kiangsi Reds.

In any event, the Hunanese general has a mysterious mission here.

President Roosevelt, however, has assured that both rumours are a small part of the plot imposed by the conservative leadership of House Administration officials state that the President's "New Deal" programme is incomplete and, in January, Congress will be asked to approve controversial and broad social legislation, and therefore, he wishes the leadership to be undisturbed, particularly in view of the fact that it is doubtful how the new members will vote.

It is reliably reported that an attempt will be made to repeal the rule permitting 145 members to force legislation to the floor, thereby strengthening the leaders' control. — United Press, per S.E. Levy and Company.

Mascara Flatters
WomenCorrect Application
Necessary.

PERMANENT EYELASH DYE

New York.

Mascara is the most flattering of all cosmetics—if it is used sparingly and correctly.

Eyelashes, the nondescript kind, that are light on the ends and really aren't attractive frames for beautiful eyes, take on a new glamor when their natural colour is deepened by the application of a little mascara.

Once upon a time actresses were the only ones who used any sort of eye make-up and even they removed it the minute they reached their dressing rooms after the performances were over.

Later, mascara and eyeshadow came to be used for formal evening wear and now they are correct on the street, the golf course—any place at all—the only rule being that a surplus of either isn't becoming and therefore is in bad taste.

Application. Learn to apply your mascara in the new manner. One shouldn't whisk the little brush back and forth across the lashes but it should be held against them while you wink. As you wink, the upper eyelashes are drawn through the bristles and, in that way, each hair is covered from tip to root.

Be careful not to get any mascara into your eyes nor to splash it on the lids. However, if a fleck does get on the eyelid, it can be easily removed with a bit of cleansing cream.

There's a new mascara on the market to-day and it really acts as a dye, staying on for many hours.

The directions say to put on a small amount, let that dry and then apply another coat. It comes in several shades.

RHINESTONE BELTS
ADD ELEGANCE.Worn With Open Buckle.

The simplest evening frock becomes quite the grand robe, by the addition of a rhinestone belt. For particularly grand occasions, a rhinestone belt in reserve will add just the necessary bit of elegance.

The newest trick for rhinestone belts is an open work buckle, so that the colour of your dress shows through. If you are being resplendent in red, green, or bright blue, you automatically acquire one set with rubies, emeralds or sapphires.

MAKING CHILDREN'S SHOES LAST

If the soles of children's shoes are painted with cold raw linseed oil three or four times before wearing the shoes will last much longer. Let the oil soak in before applying the next coat.

Ignores Paris Styles For Simplicity.

THE "HALF-OCCASION" FROCK

London.

Eva Lutyens is an excellent example of the modern English dress designer. She works entirely independently of the Parisian experts and completes each new season's frocks before even taking a glimpse at the Paris shows.

She designs for the English woman, and, in doing so, remembers our draughty country houses, our love of walking and our hatred of over-dressing. In short, she aims at simplicity in beauty of line and colour, and as little fussiness, in rows of buttons and embroideries, as possible.

Half Occasion Frocks. This designer believes that the modern woman has a special need of dresses which are suitable for "half occasions," such as an informal dinner of house party, when it is as well to be clothed about the arms and neck, but clothed smartly.

For this type of dress, she suggests one of her recent models. It comprises a long skirt of deep, blue velvet, fitting tightly over the hips and flared below; a blouse which comes just below the waist, of shell pink organdie, embroidered with silver thread. The blouse has Russian sleeves to the elbow, a neckband which lies at the back with a little bow, and is finished with stiff little epaulettes of blue velvet and a velvet belt. With this useful "half occasion" ensemble, Eva Lutyens suggests blue sandals should be worn.

"EVEN IN MY HEART"— ALHAMBRA THEATRE

A picture that calls for the expression of the deepest and most powerful emotions she has yet been called upon to portray, Barbara Stanwyck plays the part of the young wife to perfection in Warner Brothers' current production "Even In My Heart", now showing at the Alhambra Theatre.
The picture fashioned from the story written by Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Milhauser combines romance with action and pathos.
It is the story of a New England girl's marriage to a German Professor, who was later called to duty on behalf of Germany during the Great War.

The drama becomes tense as they are torn apart by circumstances they cannot surmount and winds up with a smashing climax when they come face to face in France, where the young wife is a canteen worker and her husband a spy in the German army.

Supporting Miss Stanwyck is Otto Kruger. Other players in the cast include Ralph Bellamy,
Ruth Donnelly, Laura Hope Crews,
Frank Albertson, Clara Blandick,
Elizabeth Patterson and Harry Beresford.

"THE FOUR FRIGHTENED PEOPLE"—KING'S THEATRE

A good cast, good photography, combined with humour and drama,
make the "Four Frightened People", a very entertaining film, the current attraction at the King's Theatre.

The four people in the picture are, Claudette Colbert, Mary Boland, Herbert Marshall and William Gargan.

The story centres round a plague ship. The four people then take a small boat and land in the Malay Jungle and are lost. Herbert Marshall plays the part of the "herpecked" chemist and acts as naturally as circumstances allow, while Miss Colbert and Miss Boland provide the love interest.

"FEMALE"—QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Female", a melodrama, featuring Ruth Chatterton in the role of a big business woman, a vamp, and a siren, is First National's latest production, now showing at the Queen's Theatre.

In this strange role, Miss Chat-terton appears as the ruthless executive of a huge motor car concern in which, differing from her usual portrayals, she is the vibrant and dominating head. In the midst of her business career, she manages amorous advances on the part of her subordinates.

Discarding three suitors from amongst her employees, she is eventually overwhelmed by George Brent who, slighting her, makes a vivid impression which she cannot rebuff.

Supporting Miss Chatterton and George Brent are Phillip Faversham, Johnny Mack Brown, Gavin Gordon, Ruth Donnelly and Ferdinand Gottschalk.

"THE GREEKS HAD A WORD FOR THEM"— ORIENTAL THEATRE

Three pretty blondes, Ina Claire, Joan Blondell and Madge Evans, make up the whole attraction of the United Artists production,
"The Greeks Had A Word For Them."

The tale is of these three merry maids who are "All for One and One for All" until a millionaire looms up on the horizon. Then it becomes a frantic battle of wits to win. Lowell Sherman takes the part of the millionaire.

"SLEEPERS EAST"—MAJESTIC THEATRE

"Sleepers East", featuring
Wynne Gibson, Preston Foster,
Mona Harris, and Harvey Stephens, is Fox Film's current attraction.
The plot of the story concerns
a girl who involuntarily finds herself the sole witness to a murder.
For the sake of her own reputation she keeps silent and chooses to remain out at night.

Princesses "Lilybet" and Margaret Rose
The chances that she will one day rule England are considered so probable that 8-year-old Princess Elizabeth, daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York and grand-daughter of His Majesty King George, is already being prepared for the throne once occupied by the two great queens, Elizabeth and Victoria. It is now believed that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales will never marry. There is also the possibility that he may surrender his right of succession in favour of his brother, the Duke of York. As the Duke has no son, Princess Elizabeth, his eldest daughter, may be considered heir apparent. At present, the little princess has no inkling of what fate may hold in store, as she plays with her younger sister, Princess Margaret Rose.

WOMAN'S ALL-SEEING GLANCE

Thief's Description In One Second.

Prague.
A woman told the police that her handbag had been stolen as she was leaving a Prague railway station.
The police then asked for a description of another woman who had bumped into her, for they thought that might provide a clue.
"I only saw her for a second,"
the robbed woman replied, "and hardly noticed her."
"However, I know that she was about 30, heavily made up, had reddish brown hair, probably dyed, was wearing a black hat with a green ornament, and had on a fur stole—Persian lamb, real, worth about £15—with a white blouse and ..."
The thief is now in prison.—

but fate does not choose to leave her alone.

The picture, directed by Kenneth MacKenna, is full of excitement, romance, intrigue, and humour.

"SECRET OF THE BLUE ROOM"— CENTRAL THEATRE

The tense mystery drama,
"Secret of the Blue Room," involving a sinister master of the house, a beautiful girl, a newspaper in love, and a handsome marine officer in a hopelessly entangled web of unseen death, is Universal's latest production.
The cast include Lionel Atwill,
Gloria Stuart, Paul Lukas, Edward Arnold and Onslow Stevens, and several other well-known players.

"DAY OF RECKONING"—STAR THEATRE

"Day of Reckoning," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's powerful drama of lonely women which is now showing at the Star Theatre, brings a strong cast of favourites stars headed by Richard Dix, Madge Evans, Conway Tamm, Una Merkel and Stuart Erwin into one super-production.

BRIDGE NOTES

An Optimistic Overbid.

by Ely Culbertson.

There is one excuse, poor though it may be, for overbidding at Contract Bridge and that is that it frequently affords the Declarer an opportunity to "fill his contract" by plays which, with a more conservative and natural contract, would be considered little short of insane.

Sometimes when the Dummy goes down it seems at least a hundred-to-one shot that the contract cannot be made, but as long as there is a fine glimmer of hope the fighting Bridge player takes the path that gives the one chance of success against another line that promises only to minimise the losses which may be incurred.

This is a correct general principle but it is all the more applicable when the contract which has been undertaken is a vulnerable Grand Slam with the rich rewards that come in premium points if the contract is fulfilled.

The partnership had safely reached the contract of six hearts when North decided that the heart suit was probably solid and therefore that he had not given all the Raises he had for South. Therefore he now bid seven hearts.

The Opening lead was a spade,
and when the Dummy went down
Dr. Grether of Midland, Michigan, holding the South hand, studied it carefully and realized that he must at once decide the course of his play.

One line was to take the first trick in the closed hand with the Ace, play the Ace and King of trumps, and thus go down one should the Queen be held with two other trumps. A far more risky line than this was the one possibility. That was to take the first trick in Dummy and lead the only trump for a finesse.

Should this procedure fail, the contract would be likely to be set two or three tricks if the next lead by the defence should be a discard.

The situation was desperate with no clues about distribution, and more unusual the situation, the
more chances there are that a more usual procedure will prove successful.

Morgan had been killed. Morgan chuckles when he retells the story.
"This was an hour before I reported the hold-up to the police."
"Johnny" pleaded guilty on his father's advice, and was sentenced to ten to twenty years for assault and battery. He was taken to a reformatory, speedily became the worst boy in the institution, and eventually was transferred to a convict prison, where he spent nine years.

Tolerant Views

Last May he was paroled, returned to Mooresville apparently penitent—and within a month was robbing banks at the point of an automatic. Followed then his return to prison, his dramatic escape, and subsequent adventures as an outlaw, to which this has not yet been written.

"Johnny's" fame hypnotised many people who had hitherto been regarded as—mentally sound. He was photographed in an affectionate pose with Ralph Estill, Public Prosecutor of an Indiana county, after his second arrest. The picture cost Estill the re-nomination for the post: his victorious opponent had only to distribute copies of it through the county.

Back in Mooresville "Johnny's" old friends think he was wantonly persecuted for his first wrong step.
Many of them look tolerantly on his whirlwind adventures in outlawry. His old father, a meek and faded farmer in patched overalls, is deluged by a "fan" mail from all parts of the country containing such tributes as "I certainly admire John's nerve."

But Mooresville censures him even while accepting the homage that comes indirectly through their home-grown outlaw.

"Johnny's" weakness for feminine society in an indiscriminate way is regarded with disfavor.
The recent accounts of the national hue-and-cry have featured a new companion, a half-Indian dancing girl, now in custody in Minnesota.
Says "Johnny's" pastor, the Rev.
Mr. Huston, of the First Christian Church: "There must be a lot of good in 'Johnny' or the people who knew him here wouldn't speak so well of him now. But those recent newspaper reports of him going around with all those women don't do him any good."

Another idol with feet of clay!

against Slams.

After thinking it over Dr.
Grether decided to choose the desperate way and won the Opening lead with the King in Dummy.
He then led the trump, and when the finesse worked, the rest was easy. He laid down all his trumps and the Aces of spades and clubs, and West, as can be seen, was squeezed.

The Declarer on this very well played, if over-ambitiously bid,
hand remarked:

"I have often found that the
more unusual the situation, the
more chances there are that a more
usual procedure will prove successful."

KOIKE'S WORLD SWIMMING RECORD MADE AT "Y" DOUBTED COTTON'S 67 LEADS AT SANDWICH

FORTNIGHT OF STRAIN NERVES ON EDGE DURING EPIC CONTEST THE REAL JOY OF TENNIS

(By F. J. PERRY)
Holder of the U.S., Australian, Victorian, and Bournemouth titles.

AN almost daily duel, fought against the most skillful adversaries in the world, is the portion of the player who succeeds at Wimbledon. Have spectators, who give so abundantly of sympathy and encouragement, any idea what this means to the men and women who go on winning their battles, even to those whose endeavours are cut short half-way through the tournament by defeat?

Wimbledon is worth examining from the player's as well as the onlooker's angle.

Our championships are the one meeting of the year at which everyone, almost from China to Peru, is anxious to play. More foreigners take the trouble to travel thousands of miles to come here than to any other championship in the world. Why, I do not know; possibly it is the antiquity of the great tournament; the feeling that here is the home of lawn tennis.

THRILL FROM START
So there is a thrill—as the Americans say, a "kick"—in the mere acceptance of one's entry, especially if one is young and ambitious.

My own first successful attempt to enter Wimbledon by way of the Rochester qualifying competition three years ago is recent enough for me to remember the joy of winning one of the eight vacant places in the draw.

That feeling of elation continues until the first minute of the first game of the first day of the championship. Then how quickly it vanishes! However well the newcomer may have performed in lesser tournaments, the first match or two fills one—or at least it filled me—with awe. Even in distant Court (Continued on Page 5)

NEVETT BETTER INVESTMENT

Although Gordon Richards, with 48 wins this season, is leading W. Nevett by a large margin in the list of English jockeys to June 1, punters, if they had invested £1 on each of his mounts, would have been down £31.19.0.

Nevett, who occupied a similar position in the racing table at the conclusion of last season, on a similar investment, would have paid backers £159.3.

The following are the placings of the leading jockeys in England to June 1.

£671 FROM HAMPSHIRE

The Australians have received a cheque for £671 as their share of the gate in the game with Hampshire. This is their largest sum from a match, including Test matches, so far this year.

L. F. Stokes, Shanghai's opening batsman, is jumping into form for the coming Interports. He scored 77 against the Reds in a recent match.

MARSHALL RIDES A WINNER

New Zealand Plate In Shanghai

Mr. F. Marshall, leading Shanghai jockey who was given very poor mounts at Hong Kong's Annual Meeting, won on Mr. Eve's Theatre Eve in the New Zealand Plate, over 7 furlongs in 1:49.3 at the recent Shanghai meeting.

Ming Ching (Mr. Y. S. Chan) was beaten by a neck.

Mr. J. Pote-Hunt, who rode brilliantly at the Second Extra Meeting in the Hong Kong this year, finished third, on Fiery Firefly, 1½ lengths behind Ming Ching.

Other riders known to Hong Kong were not particularly successful.

Two good dividends were paid at the meeting, the best being $119, paid on Duke of Leeds (Y. K. Wouh) in the Flying Stakes; and $102 on Merry Duralde (T. Y. Tung) in the June Grand Handicap.

Siamese Racing Has Bad Time

Taxed Almost Out Of Existence

A move, made recently on the part of a section of the membership of the Royal Turf Club of Siam to secede from the Racing Association of Siam, to which at present the three clubs, the Sports, Turf and Polo belong, was voted out.

Racing in Siam is enduring a bad spell. Prizes have had to be reduced, and the possibility is that the "Sport of Kings" may even have to be abolished.

One of the severest strains it has to bear is the taxation now in force. The contribution to the National Exchequer by the racing bodies was 25,000 ticals, last year, while in three years the taxes have been in force $38,000 has been paid.

RE-ELECTIONS FOR THIRD DIVISION SOUTH

Cardiff City and Bournemouth and Boscombe Athletic were unanimously recommended for re-election to the Third Division (South) Section of the League at the annual meeting of the League held in London recently.

Joyce Wethered Instructs In Hitting Late with Iron Clubs

Three points in which the iron shot as gradual as in the drive. The third difference follows from these two points. The writer came more into the shot. They retard the club head in the downswing, because the object is to get the club head down swing. This is half the secret. It should not be the same steady sweep as in the drive, but more of a hit. By keeping the club head back you get the late hit which is the essence of the crispness of an iron shot. The second point is that the rhythm is not as evenly distributed. The rhythm is a little different. The pace is noticeably increased at the last moment. The acceleration is more sudden and striking.

BRITAIN'S HOPE

BRITISH PLAYERS DOMINANT.

Padgham Up With Leaders.

London, To-day.

Henry Cotton the British professional residing in Brussels, is leading the field by three strokes in the First Round of the British Open Golf Championship over the Royal St. George's course at Sandwich.

Yesterday's play was featured by the magnificent performance put up by British golfers, giving rise to great optimism regarding Britain's chance of providing the winner for the first time in eleven years—Arthur Havers, who failed to qualify this year, won the distinction for Britain.

Densmore Shute, last year's winner, is the leading American with 71—four strokes in arrears of Cotton. Gene Sarazen, the 1932 winner, went round in 75.

Henry Cotton, who, with Alfred Padgham, is considered Britain's chief hope, almost equalled his course record of 66 which he established in the qualifying round. Cotton was runner-up to Padgham in the Dunlop-Southport tournament.

The form shown by Taggart, assistant professional from the Cheshire Club, was very promising. He went round in 70 to secure second place.

GARNETT'S GOOD SHOWING

Leslie Garnett, wealthy Londoner and member of the Addington Golf Club, went round in 73.

Garnett created a sensation in the British Amateur Championship at Prestwick by defeating Jack Goodman in the quarter final. He met Lawson Little, the eventual winner, in the semi-final, and was beaten on the 19th.

Among the failures were Bert Gadd, who had the qualifying round with 70 and 69, R. F. Storey, and R. Sweeney.

DECLINE OF GORILLA JONES IN BOXING RING

Decisively By Young Spaniard Over 10 Rounds At Denver

Denver, Colo., June 18.
Gorilla Jones, the National Boxing Association's middleweight champion of the world, tonight showed signs of declining when he dropped a 10-round decision to Emilio Martinez a promising Spanish boxer.

It was a brisk battle but the coloured boxer had difficulty in finding openings for his well-known knockout punch. It was an even match throughout and the verdict was aesthetically received.

JAPANESE EXHIBITION PROFIT

Doubt as to the authenticity of a world swimming record being established by S. Koike in the 200 yards breast-stroke event at the European Y.M.C.A. pool during the exhibition of the Japanese Olympic swimmers on May 24 last, was expressed by Mr. A. Donn at the meeting of the Hong Kong International Amateur Swimming Association at Lane, Crawford's restaurant yesterday evening.

Mr. Donn, in referring to the souvenir which would be sent to the Japanese swimmer in recognition of his performance, stated that he had received a cutting from the "Melbourne Herald" which contained a list of world records for swimming. This specific record was in the name of J. Cartonnet (France), who covered the distance in 2 mins. 25-3/5 seconds. Koike's time in the 25-yard Y.M.C.A. pool was 2 mins. 28-4/10 seconds.

No official statement had yet been received from the Japanese Federation on this question.

It was decided, however, that a gold medal, suitably inscribed, should be sent to Koike.

In the absence of Mr. Mok Hing-sing, the chair was taken by Mr. Wong Kam-yung. Others present at the meeting were Mr. B. Goldman, (Secretary), Mr. A. Donn, (Treasurer), Messrs. Ng Kam-chuen, W. Woodward and Leung Titi-sang.

Profit On Exhibition

The Treasurer, in his report on the Japanese Olympic visit, said that, after deducting expenses, a profit of $120 was realised on the exhibition at the Y.M.C.A. Over 300 tickets were sold. The Association's credit balance in the bank now stood at $451.35.

Letters of gratitude from the Japanese Athletic Federation were also read by the Secretary.

The following sub-committees were elected:—Water Polo. Mr. A. Donn and Mr. B. Goldman. Teams likely to enter the Water Polo League this season are the European Y.M.C.A., Navy, Hong Kong University, Chinese Bathing Club, the Young Companions and the South China A.A.

Interport With Canton

Two members of the Executive Committee were elected, namely, Messrs. Young Chi-nam and Dr. Tsui Tse Chu. The Finance Committee elected comprised Messrs. E. F. Selk and Mr. Wong Kam-yung.

The possibility of an Interport contest with Canton was also brought up at the meeting by Mr. Goldman.

A letter from the Association to Canton was receiving attention, and a definite reply would be given at a later date. It was mentioned, however, that Canton were anxious that the contest should be held in their city.

Lawn Tennis Invented by Baronet In England 60 Years Ago

The grounds of Lullingstone Castle, in which Sir William Hart Dyke designed and laid the first lawn tennis court, have been sold for building.

Sir William, the 1st Baronet, who died in 1878, was the first to play lawn tennis on the lawn of Lullingstone Castle, where the first game was played by Sir William and his wife.

One of the first women players was Lady Emily, Hart Dyke, his wife, who was the first to play lawn tennis on the lawn of Lullingstone Castle, where the first game was played by Sir William and his wife.

The Dykes have owned Lullingstone Castle since 1872.

Donald Leach is showing good cricket form in Shanghai. Last week-end he scored 56 against the Reds.

O'REILLY HAS 9 FOR 38

Somerset Dismissed For 116.

WOODFULL AND DARLING IN BIG PARTNERSHIP

London, To-day.

Remarkable bowling by W. J. O'Reilly, who was mainly responsible for Australia's win in the first Test, dismissed Somerset for 116 at Taunton yesterday, and the tourists wound up the day with a lead of 32 with eight wickets in hand.

O'Reilly, a first change bowler, secured 9 for 38, which was considerably better than Clarence Grimmett's 9 for 74 against Cambridge University on the present tour.

Scores as cabled by Reuter were as follows:

Somerset: 116 (F. S. Lee 59 not out, W. J. O'Reilly 9 for 38).

Australia: 148 for 2 (W. M. Woodfull 59 not out, L. Darling 62 not out).

O'Reilly is a tall and well-built right-hand bowler, and has as his stock delivery a medium-paced ball which straightens up from the leg. He can also bowl one which gathers pace and goes straight through, and one which whips back from the off at great pace. He is recognised as probably the greatest bowling find since Grimmett.

A schoolmaster at Bowral, where Bradman made his early reputation, O'Reilly bats left-hand and is a keen slip fieldman. He came to light with the North Sydney C.C., and his first appearances in Tests against England were during the tour of D. R. Jardine's team in 1932-33. In the five matches he took 27 wickets. He is aged 29.—Reuter.

OPEN PAIRS MATCH POSTPONED

The Open Pairs Lawn Bowls match between E. G. Post and G. Perkins (Police) and F. J. Jones and A. W. Grimmett (Civil Service), which was to have taken place at the Club de Recreio yesterday, was postponed owing to the absence of the Civil Service pair.

R.A.F. COMMAND CUP RETAINED BY INDIA

London, June 8.

The R.A.F. home teams shot at Bisley to-day for the Command Cup, but failed to beat the score of 1,216 made by the R.A.F. Command India, who thus retain the cup.

The Middle East was second, scoring 1,210.

LAST BOUT THERE

POOR DECISION AGAINST HIS BASQUE RIVAL

MANAGER UP FOR FRAUD

Barcelona, June 21.

Max Schmeling will never again fight in a Spanish ring no matter how attractive the purse offered. So he asserts, and his redoubtable manager, Joe Jacobs, echoes the assertion in emphatic terms.

The pair arrived at this conclusion after the 12-round match with Uzcudon on May 13 was declared a draw—a decision which even many of the pro-Fascist fans had to admit was charity to their favourite.

Schmeling cut the rugged Basque to pieces with raking lefts, and in the opinion of most of those present won at least eight of the 12 rounds.

But it was not only the decision which riled Mr. Jacobs and his protegee. Things seemed to go badly for them almost from the minute they put foot on Spanish soil to the time they stepped off it.

WALLETS STOLEN

Shortly after arriving Schmeling and one of his sparring partners had their wallets lifted by pick-pockets. Jacobs demanded police protection. The chief of police smilingly refused.

"It would look like we weren't honest in Barcelona," he said.

Then the fight, originally scheduled for April 8, was suddenly postponed by the promoters. They announced Schmeling had hurt his hand.

Those supposed to know suggested that a poor advance ticket sale and not an injury—to Max had prompted the postponement. Afterwards Max shrugged meaningly when this suggestion was passed along to him for verification.

However that be, the "great athletic circus", featuring 36 boxing matches with three rings simultaneously active, certainly was not a financial success when it was finally staged.

SECOND HAT TRICK FOR SUSSEX

Maurice Tate's Feat Against Northants

Fine bowling by Tate, who in 13 overs and a ball took 5 wickets for 17 runs and accomplished the hat trick, led to the speedy defeat of Northamptonshire by Sussex at Peterborough.

With four wickets down for 86 overnight Northamptonshire required 116 to save the follow-on. Timms and Cox carried the total to 107, and then Tate started off his hat trick by getting Timms caught at short leg.

Liddell was l.b.w. to the next ball, and Eiderkin was bowled by a real sizzler.

Tate took these three wickets in his sixth over at a cost of only one run. In the innings he had seven for 42 and in the match eight for 68.

He has only done the hat trick once before for Sussex—against Middlesex at Lord's, eight years ago, when he took the wickets of Bryce, Allen, and Haig.

LEADING N. H. JOCKEY

With 54 successes to his credit, G. Wilson is again champion jockey under National Hunt rules for the season, which closed on June 1 at Colwell Park. Last season he headed the list with 61 winners.

WIMBLEDON'S MANY THRILLS

16 there is still that tension which no other tournament gives. A new boy at a big school is not more funky.

SOMETHING SNAPS

You enter the court prepared to do or die. Then something seems to snap. Can you ever have learned anything of lawn tennis? Your favourite shots all go out; you serve double faults; miss easy winners, all apparently for no reason. Your opponent may be a more exalted and more experienced being, but your miserable failure cannot all be due to him.

Then suddenly things right themselves. You find that you are a tennis player—of sorts—after all. Indeed, you play better, under a returned sense of exaltation, than you ever play in your life.

If in due course you are lucky enough to be given a centre-court match the same terror returns. Until familiarity lessens nervousness you feel so small, so insignificant—a central figure in the vast crowd.

When an untakeable shot comes from the other end you feel almost silly at being thus beaten. But again after a few games self-conscious fears wear off. The game is a joy once more; the crowd an inspiration to put one's last ounce into it.

MENTALLY TIRING

But a fortnight of Wimbledon is one of cumulative nerve strain, not only on the courts but off them, even to the giants of the game. Physically and mentally it is tiring, and when the last few days come it is no wonder if some even of the old campaigners grow touchy at times. That daily duel tells its tale on the nerves.

This process of strain does not end when the day's play is over.

LARWOOD BOWLS LEG THEORY

Ball Rises Head-High

In the match between Notts and Essex, contrary to expectation, Larwood, who had withdrawn from the Test trial because he did not consider himself fit, opened the attack with Voce when Essex went in to bat.

He began with an orthodox field, but later tried leg-theory with four men close to the batsman. He did not secure a wicket, but at times bowled at a great pace, often making the ball rise head-high, and revealing no sign of foot trouble.

REJECTED BOWLER TAKES SURREY WICKETS

In the recent match against Essex the strong Surrey side collapsed against the fast bowling of Read, the old Winchesterite, who was rejected by Surrey last year after a trial. His final figures were:

O. M. R. W.
9.1 0 35 7

For one exciting fortnight one lives entirely in a tennis atmosphere. It is the most difficult thing in the world to drag oneself away until the last ball has been hit for the day. When one's own match is over the struggles of the other fellows lure one into the competitors' stand.

And so, from morning to night in the whole eager fortnight, one exists for tennis—cannot get away from it.

Yes, Wimbledon is an anxiety, a nerve strain, a fortnight of repeated exhaustion. But it is a joy and spur to ambition such as only the player can realise. I enjoy every hour of it.

AMERICAN TREASURY RETICENT

Refuse To Discuss Silver Question.

PURCHASES STILL VEILED

Washington, To-day. The report that the United States Government has decided to embark on a great silver-buying campaign involving the purchase of some 11,254,000,000 ounces during the next six months, has aroused widespread interest, but Treasury officials refuse to discuss the question of silver.

The Treasury, at present, is authorized to purchase silver exceeding 1,000,000,000 ounces, but it cannot, at present, be definitely determined whether it will do so.

TREASURY RETICENCE

The Treasury officials have declined to comment on the statement of Representative Dies that the Treasury has already bought 75,000,000 ounces of silver. The Treasury has consistently declined to reveal the figures of its purchases, and as most silver is purchased by, and paid for, from the stabilization fund, the figures do not appear in the daily Treasury statement.

The Treasury intends to begin purchases from exits of the general fund some time in the future, and its acquisitions of silver will then be shown daily. — Reuter.

SILVER BROKERS WARNED

Washington, To-day. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has warned United States silver brokers, who are holding long positions for holders outside the United States, to procure immediately sworn statements by their clients covering the facts which must be shown upon liquidation, if liquidated after September 1.

Until then, if it is impossible to obtain a memorandum sworn to by the owner, the broker must prepare a memorandum on behalf of the owner if the contract is to be liquidated. — Reuter.

REGULATION DETAILS

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL. (By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received June 28, 6.51 a.m.)

Washington, To-day. The United States Treasury has issued regulations making silver brokers responsible for furnishing the Internal Revenue Bureau with properly tax-stamped memoranda covering dealings with foreign customers.

The broker shall not execute any transfer for customers outside the United States without the customers first authorizing him to purchase stamps. The broker, however, "may liquidate a long position standing on his books on or before June 28, 1934, without such authorization and deliver a memorandum without stamps on condition that he makes every reasonable effort to obtain from his customer authority for the purchase of stamps to be affixed as soon as possible to the memorandum and shall not remit any balance to such customer until he has obtained such authority, and shall, in determining the margin or similar requirements, treat as a liability of the customer, the unpaid amount of tax computed on such information as available to the broker." — United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

THE "FIGHT IT OUT" DEBTOR.

Now In Hospital.

Chu Sam, a 45-year-old deportee from Singapore, was charged before Mr. E. I. Wynne Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning for assaulting Pang Shui Fat, another deportee from Singapore, and bodily wounding him.

Defendant stated that he had lent the complainant a sum of $4.50, of which only $3.00 had been paid back. When he asked for it the complainant said, "I won't pay, so let us fight it out."

During the fight the defendant picked up a earthenware pillow and struck the complainant over the head with it.

The case was remanded for seven days as the complainant is in hospital and will not be out till next week.

So overcome was Ramon Grau San Martin by the enthusiasm with which he was welcomed back to Havana from Mexico that the former Provisional President of Cuba fainted. Here is the prodigal being "chained" by admirers on his arrival at Havana. He may be the candidate of the Revolutionary Party for the Presidency in the next election.

DULL TONE CONTINUES ON WALL STREET

E. A. Pierce Co.'s Comment

Messrs. E. A. Pierce and Company, New York correspondents for the American Oriental Finance Corporation, state:—

New York, Yesterday.

"Stocks:—Trading did not extend, nor did demand for stocks particularly increase, but we think that a good many traders are awaiting the expected announcements from Washington regarding the personnel of the Stock Exchange Commission and the disposition of important Bills on which the President's broadcast, which is scheduled for Thursday. Business done 630,000 shares.

"Wheat: The market is nervous. The movement of the crop in the South-West is heavy, but not much new wheat is offering. The Winnipeg market is slightly easier on beneficial rains in the Canadian Bgt. Tuesday's sales: 30,746,000 bushels.

"Cotton: The market is reactionary, induced by a more favourable weekly weather report, than had been expected. Trading and Far Eastern interests bought on the scale-down. Speculative demands were smaller.

"Silver: Silver futures were higher on an advance being reported in the Government's purchase price for July to around 45.70 to 45.75. The advance met with speculative profit-taking. Business done: 214 contracts.

"Rubber: Featureless. Business done 338 contracts.

Night Telegram.

"The following telegrams were received from New York during the night service:

"The President's broadcast, which is scheduled for Thursday and the Hutcheson dividend were responsible for yesterday's strength. At the opening to-day, prices were higher, metal stocks being a feature of the market. The volume of business is tending to decline on the up-side.

"There was heavy liquidation of silver futures for July and December, with near positions being absorbed by the same source. The banks were again straddling the narrowing differences.

"At the opening of the cotton market, scattered liquidation and Southern selling was being absorbed by the Trade." — Reuter.

CHINA'S MYSTERY MAN

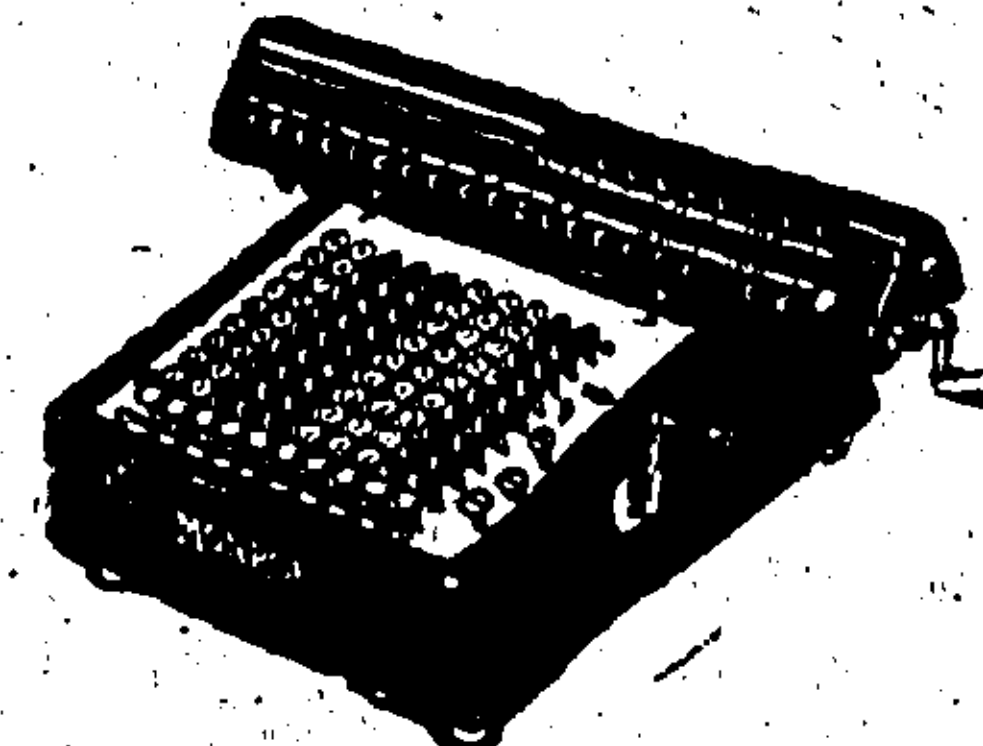

(Continued from page 1.) Competent observers believe that if General Ho Chien were acting as a spokesman of the Nanking military in the same capacity as General Chiang Kai-shek, he would not be so enthusiastically welcomed by the Kuomintang veterans here and the Kwangsi military leaders. Should General Ho proceed northward via Hong Kong, Mr. Hu Han-min is looking forward to see him. Mr. Hu, his Kuomintang colleagues in Canton, and the Kwangsi military men, are all critics of the present regime in Nanking, particularly General Chiang Kai-shek and Premier Wang Ching-wai.

GAS EXPLOSION INQUIRY.

Ex-Manager Suggests Foul Play.

MORE EXPERT EVIDENCE.

Continuing his evidence in the Coroner's inquiry into the gasometer explosion at West Point, on May 14 last, Mr. L. J. Blackburn, a former general manager of the Hong Kong and China Gas Company, at Central Magistracy yesterday, advanced the suggestion that a bomb or an explosion from an outside source caused the explosion of the gasometer.

Mr. Blackburn said that it was unthinkable that the plate could have come off as suggested during the inquiry. Even the action of heat, when there was a flash back, could not have opened up the plates. His theory was that there must have been an explosion outside the holder which opened the plates. To support his theory, Mr. Blackburn remarked that during the 1925 strike, there was a plot to bomb all holders. Mr. Blackburn also said that the buildings at West Point were closer than one would wish to the holder, but there were holders in England with buildings situated much nearer.

The inquiry is being conducted by Mr. E. W. Hamilton, sitting with a Jury comprising Messrs. P. Taster (foreman), L. Dunbar and D. Drummond. Mr. W. A. MacKinnon is appearing for the Gas Company and Mrs. W. M. Brown for certain owners whose property was damaged.

At the conclusion of yesterday's hearing Mr. MacKinnon intimated that Mr. Baker, chief engineer of the Shanghai Gas Works and two directors of Messrs. Samuel Candler and Sons, Millwall, the constructors of the holder, would be called to give expert evidence. The inquiry was adjourned until Friday afternoon.

PORTUGUESE BANISHED RETURNS TO COLONY

On the application of Detective Sergeant Moran accused was remanded 24 hours in police custody for further investigation.

The Clearing House Scheme.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer had no difficulty in passing through the House of Commons the provisions of his Bill to provide a Clearing House for foreign payments, but it would be idle to deny that it is only one more retrograde step. Although it was the financial policy of Germany that suggested the plan, the Bill itself is of quite general application; and it is one more step towards national trading and bargaining in place of the freedom of contract between individuals.

The scheme itself is practically the same that was adopted at the end of the war, and that owed its origin to the war spirit. All the belligerent powers found themselves in possession of large quantities of private enemy property, which they were bound to restore to the owners on the advent of peace. But feelings were too exasperated and suspicion too rife for a simple transaction of handing back without the assurance that the former enemy would deal equally fairly with the private property held by him and returnable to other nationals. A system was accordingly introduced under which a debit note was issued in London and would be honoured in Berlin when advice was received that a payment of equal amount had been made in sterling to the holder of a similar claim in Germany. The system worked quite smoothly, until all claims had been satisfied; but it was obviously an aftermath of war and not an ordinary commercial transaction.

Negotiations have been begun that we may hope will be successful; but the new Bill confers power to return to war conditions on the economic plane; and it is necessary to make the reasons clear. The present negotiations have nothing to do with war debt or reparations. Dr. Schacht, the head of the Reichsbank, has referred to them, but the reparations debts were wiped out at Lausanne. Not a mark has been paid on that account since. Great Britain is merely claiming that all creditors should be treated alike, and that the debtor country should pay what it can.

A part of the settlement that was designed to put Germany on her feet again after her currency debacle was an arrangement by which certain loans were to be raised, chiefly in New York and London, that were calculated to be quite sufficient for the purpose. They are called the "Davies" and "Young" loans, after the American bankers who assessed the amounts required and arranged for the security. The essential thing was to restore the credit of German finance. The face value of the sterling bonds was a hundred pounds, and ten million pounds were subscribed in London for the first loan; nine million for the second. The amount required for the annual service of these loans is under two million pounds. To both countries Germany sells much more than she buys; that is, she has what is called a favourable balance of trade. Her sales to England last year were thirty million pounds, her purchases only a third of that sum. She therefore had a large sterling balance, enough to pay the interest ten times over.

Instead of paying the interest in sterling as it fell due, an elaborate method of deferred payments was introduced that made the bonds a much less desirable holding, and their price dropped to about forty three pounds. The money that should have been used for interest was then employed, with other large amounts, to buy the depreciated bonds. Some of them were actually resold in Berlin at a profit to the Reichsbank.

One hears a great deal nowadays of Internationalism as a political theory or ideal. Up to twenty years ago there was in fact a vast amount of practical Internationalism based on good faith and the honest fulfilment of contracts. Every new shock to credit narrows at once both the field of international dealings and of individual investment and enterprise.

There is nothing to be said for the theory that things will right themselves in time. Confidence can only return by a statesmanlike agreement honourably administered. The League of Nations should have tackled the economic rather than the political problems first. Even in face of the fiasco of the World Economic Conference, something on the same lines must be attempted.

Wimbledon.

The Wimbledon fortnight began on Monday with signs that it will again be a triumphantly thrilling and populous. The queer fact that a game which, however ancient its ancestry, is not yet sixty years old, should require for its championships the largest arena in the world is proof in itself of the peculiar fitness of lawn tennis to modern humanity. It is to-day by far the most com-

Packington

"Packington," or "The Yards," the scene of the recent great fire in Chicago, is a combination of factory and cattle ranch.

It is a city within a city. It has its own system of electricity and water, its own police and traffic officers, and miles of private railway tracks.

During the day-time its population is 75,000. Visitors are encouraged to inspect it. The Armour Company has a corps of guides, who conduct daily tours.

The visitor can see the whole process whereby pigs or steers are converted into a hundred varieties of pork and beef, not to mention a whole series of by-products.

There is truth in the original Armour's statement that "nothing of the pig is wasted but his squeal."

Upton Sinclair Out Of Date

The history of "The Yards" is written in human as well as animal blood.

The original Armour, the famous P. D., made his fortune by selling pork "short" at the end of the Civil War. His competitors thought that peace was still far away.

He was a hard taskmaster. In those early days the working day was 12 hours. The men's struggle for a 10-hour and, later, an eight-hour day was won only after serious riots and bloodshed.

Forty years ago the district was—metaphorically and almost literally—a cesspool.

To-day the visitor, ready to boil with indignation after reading Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle," comes away disappointed.

Although far from beautiful, "Packington" is a model of cleanliness and hygiene.

pletely international of games.

Its world-wide fascination has rather grim meaning for English people. The memory of man hardly runneth to the time when an Englishman won the singles at Wimbledon. The women's singles were indeed, in English hands for years before the war, but Britain has not very much to be proud of since. The experts tell us that England may come into her own again this year. The prospects of English lawn tennis, they say, have not been so bright since the beginning of the century, when the Dohertys were beating the world.

If there is any soundness in human judgment the young men in England who have come to the front are as good as any in the world, and the young women are also showing good promise. Though the great Crawford is still mobile, though other well-come invaders are worthy of the best steel Britain can, and this year's Wimbledon may bring England glory again.

SHAME OF JOHN DILLINGER

OLD OUTLAWS WOULD HAVE SCORNE HIM

IDOL WITH FEET OF CLAY

(By Sir Percival Phillips.)

Chicago.

SUPER-MEN are popularly supposed to be one of the products of the great American Republic. While some of the exhibits lately on view are of doubtful authenticity it cannot be denied that at least she has given the world the super-outlaw. "Public Enemy No. 1," ne John Dillinger, enjoys that unenviable reputation. The outlaws known to Europe are but feeble offshoots of crime compared to this robust "killer" with the "snake's eyes" and a murderous sense of humour, whose exploits continue to fill the newspapers and give the police many sleepless nights.

Times have indeed changes since the good old days when an outlaw might also be a gentleman.

This new type of desperado thrown up by the machine-gun age lacks manners as well as morals. He has nothing in common with the heroes of the Comcan hills or the Sicilian celebrities of the Mafia. Unlike them, he will kill a friend as readily as an enemy, if the act will ensure his freedom when hard pressed. His flight from the law has left a trail of corpses, broken cars and riddled bank buildings.

There is no romance in him. He would be outlawed by the outlaws of the past.

The American school of crime was nearly responsible for putting the now defunct Mafia on a new basis of outlawry. A few years ago, before Mussolini sent the indomitable Cesare Mori to Sicily to break up that centuries-old organisation, it was the object of careful study by certain graduates of the gangster or cadet branch founded in Chicago.

These worthies were transplanted Sicilians or their sons who had risen in the bootlegging and racketeering games. An invidious murder forced two of them to flee the country and they were next heard of under cover in Palermo. Contact with elder brethren of the Mafia there disclosed the possibilities of reorganising the old-fashioned brotherhood on Chicago lines and making it a "going concern."

Cesare Mori's Drive

They might have succeeded but for Mori's drive inland from the coast. The Mafia fell piecemeal into his net of gendarmes. It was a slow business, but wholly successful. The Chicagoans fled dismayed to the hinterland, intent only on saving their skins. When captured with their more reputable companions in outlawry they were thankful to be extradited to the comparative safety of the Chicago courts. The others were put in cages.

I saw some of them months later at their trial in a market town, where the peasants had gathered from miles around to stare at their late masters. They were a dejected lot without their haloes.

The American outlaw has always been in a class alone. Jesse James, the train robber, was the first spectacular member of the fraternity to become a national figure. His rough-riders, with sheriffs and their posesses lagging impotently behind, swept through the sparsely settled Western States, holding up railway cars laden with specie, sifting the terrified passengers to their last gold watch, shooting down every human impediment in their path, and vanishing again to one of their remote hiding-places far beyond reach of their pursuers.

Jesse James

Jesse James had his imitators, but none achieved such notoriety or was such a distinctive figure. His escapades entered the realm of fiction before the end came. Six-penny "shockers" emblazoned with a lurid portrait of the outlaw, complete with wide-brimmed hat and a brace of six-shooters, flooded the United States and were read with fearful joy by the rising generation. Other outlaws of the plains followed him into cheap literature. The brotherhood had its monument in the paper-backed novels of the day.

The machine-gun age has sent the old-time outlaw into oblivion. His technique seems curiously crude in the light of modern methods. The outlaw of to-day disdains to hide himself in a wilderness. He challenges society from an armoured car and cities are his prey. Gas bombs, chain mail waistcoats, wire-less, saw-off shotguns and automatic pistols are his tools of trade. His progress has been speeded up and his traditional enemy, the sheriff, still lags behind. He has been known to evade military forces as easily as a wideflying police net and to slip through the walls of an apparently impenetrable prison with the ease of a Houdini.

Which brings us back to Public Enemy No. 1 in this country, the elusive John Dillinger, now at large with a heavy price upon his head and an ineradicable smile upon his degenerate face—Dillinger, King of the Outlaws. His charmed life is a nightmare to the distraught guardians of the peace in every Western State. A fugitive convict, he laughs at prison bars, and his merriment has a sinister ring. Even his pursuers laughed grimly when he bluffed his way out of a guarded cell with a wooden revolver and made national fools of the wardens in his path.

Dillinger A Born Bandit

Dillinger's record tends to prove that outlaws are born rather than made. His life of crime was entered on voluntarily as an antidote to the boredom of the Indiana hamlet where he was born. Since he became the first outlaw of America, the incidents of his mis-spent youth have filled the newspapers and inquiring reporters have ransacked his home town for stories, as they do when a man becomes President-elect of the United States.

Public Enemy No. 1 is still "Johnny" in Mooresville, Indiana, whence he came. The 1,774 inhabitants have only to cast their memories back ten years to recall him as a 21-year-old machinist and the son of a trustee of the First Christian Church. He had an engaging grin, and went to Sunday school because he had to. Bad companions were "Johnny's" downfall. His "hero" was Ed Singleton, a boy older than himself, who also had the germ of outlawry in him.

One Saturday night they waylaid an elderly grocer named Morgan on his way home from the village barber shop, beat him about the head and tried to rob him. "Johnny" for the first time used the magic formula, "Stick 'em up!" Morgan grappled with him instead, "Johnny's" revolver went off, and the embryo outlaws fled. Their victim staggered home with no worse injury than a headache.

Half an hour later "Johnny" put his head in the door of the local restaurant and asked worriedly if

BRITISH WAR DEBT NOTE

OUTFITTING TRADE TROUBLES

Moderate Year For Wm. Powell, Ltd.

CREDIT DISCOUNT SYSTEM INSTITUTED

"Your Directors are fully alive to the necessity of increasing the turnover and attracting new customers, and it is in this connection that I would like to mention that we have just instituted a special credit discount system," said Mr. E. M. Raymond, Chairman of Directors, at the annual meeting of Messrs. William Powell, Limited, to-day.

Those present were Mr. E. M. Raymond, Chairman, Messrs. J. H. Seth and H. Overy, Directors, Mr. W. L. Alexander, secretary, and Messrs. A. Nissim, H. J. M. de Figueredo and Wong Ping-fan, shareholders.

Moving the adoption of the report and accounts the Chairman said:

Gentlemen:—"Our turnover for the year has been disappointing, but I am glad to say that we seem to have obtained our share of what business there was. Very few retail stores have maintained their turnover, and I regret to state that, up to the present, there appears to be no sign of a revival of trade."

"Your Directors are fully alive to the necessity of increasing the turnover and attracting new customers, and, in this connection, I should like to mention that we have just instituted a special credit discount scheme, the details of which Mr. Overy, Managing Director, will be pleased to explain to anyone interested."

On May 1 we moved into our new premises, in the Hong Kong Stock Exchange, and I think shareholders will agree that it is a store in which we can take pride. The customers' convenience has been studied in every way, and the Staff deserve great credit for the efficient manner in which the removal was carried out."

"I think the Accounts presented are self-explanatory, but I should like to point out that your Directors have considered it advisable to write down 'Furniture and Fittings' by a further $938.25, leaving the book value of this asset at $2,300.00."

The adoption of the report and accounts was seconded by Mr. H. Overy, and carried unanimously.

The retiring director, Mr. E. M. Raymond, was re-elected on the proposal of Mr. H. J. M. de Figueredo, seconded by Mr. Wong Ping-fan.

The re-election of the retiring auditors, Messrs. Linstead and Davitt, at a fee of $325, was carried on the proposal of Mr. A. Nissim, seconded by Mr. H. J. M. de Figueredo.

AUSTRIAN SOLDIERS BREAK BARRACKS

Outburst Against Heimwehr.

Graz, To-day.

Four hundred soldiers of the Austrian regular army broke barracks here yesterday and demonstrated in the Public Square against Prince Starhemberg and the Heimwehr.

They beat Heimwehr men in the streets, and other troops with fixed bayonets, were called out and drove the demonstrators back to the barracks.

The incident arose from the Heimwehr assault on Tuesday on a soldier, since when the soldiers have been confined to barracks.—Reuter.

U.S. NOVELIST DIES IN SAN DIEGO.

Eugene Manlove Rhodes At Age Of 65.

San Diego, California, To-day.

The death occurred yesterday of the well-known novelist, Mr. Eugene Manlove Rhodes, at the age of 65.

Mr. Rhodes, who was a cowboy in New Mexico for 25 years, began writing for publication in 1906. Among his novels are: "Good Men and True," "Bransford in Arcadia," "The Desire of the Moth," "West to West," "Steps of Light," "Say Now Shilbolen" and "The Copper Street Trail."

WILLINGNESS TO CONTINUE DISCUSSION

Amount To Be Paid Primary Question.

FRIENDLY REPLY

London, To-day.

Couched in a friendly tone, the British Government's reply to the United States war debt note, handed to the State Department yesterday, reiterates Britain's willingness to resume discussion on the matter whenever it appears that there are favourable prospects of success.

The note expresses the view that the primary question for settlement is the amount that should be paid having regard to all the circumstances of the debt. The following is the text of His Majesty's Government's reply to the United States note:

"After careful consideration of the note which you addressed to Sir Ronald Lindsay on June 12, His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom feel there are two questions to which it may be useful to make further reference."

STATEMENT OF FACT

"In the first place, His Majesty's Government would observe that in their note of June 4 they did not state that the payment of the British war debt was legally contingent upon the payment of debts due to them. What they said was that it would be impossible for them to contemplate a situation in which they would be called upon to honour in full their war obligations to others while continuing to suspend all demands for payment of war obligations due to them. This was a statement, not of law, but of fact."

"Secondly, regarding the suggestion of payments in kind, His Majesty's Government would recall that the experience of the German reparations showed that the transfer difficulties are not solved by a system of deliveries in kind."

1934 POINT OF VIEW

"As the Committee presided over by General Dawes pointed out in 1924: In their financial effects, deliveries in kind are not really distinguishable from cash payments. In fact, economic objections to cash payments would apply with equal force to deliveries in kind unless those deliveries were to consist of indigenous products of a debtor country, excluding re-exports, and unless they were to be accepted by the creditor country and consumed by it in addition to the normal course of trade. If the United Kingdom were not to receive payment in goods exported on commercial account, her exchange resources available for the purchase of cotton and other goods from America would be still further diminished."

NO PRACTICABLE PLAN

"Therefore, His Majesty's Government do not at present see any method of putting such a plan into practice which would be likely to commend itself to the Government of United States."

"In the view of His Majesty's Government, the primary question for settlement is the amount that should be paid, having regard to all circumstances of these debts. They regret that up to the present it has not been possible to make further progress in this matter, but they will welcome an opportunity of resuming discussion whenever it may appear that the present conditions have so far passed away as to afford favourable prospects for settlement, and they are sincerely anxious to remove from the sphere of controversy all, or any, matters which might disturb the harmony of relations between the two countries."

BRITISH WIRELESS SERVICE

GERMAN EXPERIENCE

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.

Washington, To-day.

The British note to the United States has rejected the suggestion for payments in kind because they are impractical. It pointed out that Germany's experience of paying reparations in kind demonstrated that the "transfer difficulties" were unsolved thereby.

If the United Kingdom did not receive payment for goods exported here on commercial account, its exchange resources available for the purchase of cotton and other commodities from the United States would be still further diminished. Therefore, while not unwilling to give further consideration to

FORTY-THIRD BY-ELECTION

London, To-day.

With a considerably reduced majority, the Conservative Party yesterday retained the Weston-super-Mare Parliamentary seat at the by-election, caused by the appointment of Lord Erskine to the Governorship of Madras.

The polling was as follows:—Mr. Orr Ewing, Conservative, 21,203 votes.

Mr. Scott Stokes, Liberal, 7,551 votes.

Mr. A. Millett, Labour, 5,715 votes. This was the forty-third by-election to take place since the General Election in 1931, in many cases resulting in Labour gains from the Conservatives. The Parliamentary representative, however, remains unchanged as the result of the other contests.

In a straight fight with the candidate at the General Election, Lord Erskine returned a majority of 29,350.—British Wireless Service.

Discussions Described "Very Friendly."

SPECIAL TO CHINA MAIL.

With a view to withdrawing the Berlin moratorium and also averting the threatened British clearing office against Germany, the German transfer delegation opened negotiations at the Treasury at 11 a.m. yesterday.

After a two-hour meeting a communiqué was issued and explained the viewpoints, adding that "the discussions were very friendly." They continued in the afternoon.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

possibilities in this direction, His Majesty's Government cannot, at present, see any method for putting such a plan into practice which would be likely to commend itself to the United States," the note adds.—United Press, per S. E. Levy and Company.

NOTE COMMENDED

London, To-day.

The arguments in the British war debts note are generally commended in the press.

The Daily Telegraph describes the logic as "unanswerable" and urges that an impasse has been reached, and that the time has come to get down to hard facts in friendly conference.—Reuter.

The British note was published here without comment by officials. Observers believe that the question of war debts payments is now suspended until Great Britain advances definite proposals.—Reuter.

To-day's Short Story.

The Keepers Of The Sanctuary

By A. V. Hall.

WHILE the elders sat scratching in portentous conclave the whelps of the tribe made merry on the smooth, dizzily-topping lip of the council stone.

High rose the kopje, bald and grey. It looked like a tower, like a megalith, like one of those monstrous relics of the dawning of man's soul, blood-tinctured in its antiquity. The narrow southern face of it rose abrupt and sheer above the mopani foliage without so much as a cranny for a rock-rabbit to find foothold; but baboons know nothing of verigo; those youngsters bickered, screeched, turned cartwheels, and wrestled with utter unconcern upon that overhanging slab, cheating disaster at the very last possible moment—with a careless handgrip, or with one of those peculiar side-slides by means of which a monkey seems able to defy the laws of gravity.

Andy Gordon, storekeeper at M'silikadzi's, paused at the summit of the kaffir path below and learned against his battered push-bike to watch. He clapped his hands.

"Voetsak—you thieving bob-bijans!"

To which the baboon sentry—a lone, statuesque figure on the pinnacle—replied with a bark which was merely the simian equivalent of "Sez you!" For the rock-folk, though allegedly poor mathematicians, are quite sufficiently acute to differentiate between the smack of palms and a rifle-crack; moreover, the baboons of the hill-country around M'silikadzi's kraal had long ceased to confuse this man of strange habits with the village braves whose badge of final and complete manhood was a head-dress of baboon skin.

This tribe, in particular, had good reason to know and respect the white-trader whose "camp"—a collection of circular, thatched huts built about a central compound—lay almost in the shadow of tall Ngwe mountain, their abode.

Now Andy's garden lay in the tiny vale between the camp and the hill itself; and when the mealies and the tomatoes were ripening it needed a strong fence and a vigilant gun-boy to avert a midnight raid upon the crops. And in M'silikadzi's country neither the one nor the other were commonly to be met with.

One morning then, about a year ago, Andy had discovered a scene of havoc: an elephant couldn't have laid waste that garden more completely.

"All hands turn out!" he ordered the village headman; and the youth of M'silikadzi's prepared promptly for action; for every nigger loves a baboon drive. Under Andy's generalship, they scoured the hills within a ten-mile radius, driving the baboons before them to a neck of rock where the Inkos could take wholesale vengeance as the creatures fled past his stance.

Many old men baboons fell that day to Andy's rifle, till at last a slut, with a sucking babe clinging to her neck, sickened him of the slaughter by an act of downright heroism. This baboon-woman, scared by the shouting of the boys behind her and the crack, crack of the gun in front, leaped convulsively when she saw the white man so close, dislodging her picayun. Those behind jostled her along; in another moment, she and the rest of the tribe had passed the danger-point while the whelp, finding himself abandoned, tottered bewilderedly towards the enemy.

Andy, coveting that little morsel of red-dish, bristling fur for a pet, ran out from his firing-position to secure it. But the mother was too quick for him. Back she came, fear overcome by concern, and snatched up the babe almost from under his outstretched hands. For a long second she had crouched, clapping it—her little black button-eyes measuring and defying the man and his gun. Then she ran—leaving Andy prey to a queer sense of embarrassment—a feeling that he had been persecuting his own kinsfolk unawares.

And, though he was no more a sentimentalist than most men who live in loneliness and exile, the feeling remained: it was strange—and yet not so strange, perhaps—that, while he esteemed and even befriended the Abaroni of the vicinity as niggers, his idler imaginings turned to the rock-folk for stimulus.

Not so strange, because in those hundred hills, tossing their naked heads around and about M'silikadzi's like the towers of a long-dead city, there was an air of mystery to which those apes, rather than the bland, childlike people of the villages, belonged. It was not as absurd as it seemed to endow those tall, basaltic freaks with human—or perhaps pre-human—associations: that country reeked of man's antiquity; in a score of kloofs and sun-scorched peaks there remained implanted upon the imperishable stone evidence such as staggered the mind of the trader with fantastic possibilities.

That aged Chief M'silikadzi himself refused with all a nigger's obstinacy to be drawn into Andy Gordon's conjectural discussions.

"Ah, ah! How should I know...?" It was a fact that the old man's great-great-grandfather had been the first Muntu to set foot in this jumble of hills—an advance-leader of the great invasion. And M'silikadzi's ancestor had been greeted by the baboons.... Oh, yes, those queer rock-folk, with their look of changelessness and antiquity, their wizened, world-weary little faces and their suggestion of survivorship from remote, undreamed-of orders, gave a lonely, penitential, plenty of food for thought.

CHRIS "RED" CAGLE

PAUL CAPRON

According to a new ruling by Vassar College authorities, students at the famous school may now embark blithely upon the marital sea without fear of banishment from the Alma Mater or exclusion from the time-honoured daisy chain. The lifting of the ban on marriage is expected to cut down the number of elopements and secret marriages, although a provision in the new rules says that a student who marries and desires to finish her college courses must reside in the school. The Vassar action recalls the stringency with which the anti-marriage rule is enforced at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. Notable cases of cadets who broke the rule and were obliged to resign were those of Christian "Red" Cagle, Army football hero, and Paul Capron. The latter, son of a long line of soldiers, married the daughter of a West Point gunnery instructor, but the fact that he virtually married into the Army did not excuse him—he resigned.

Yet, for the most part, he was content to take them as he found them—clever, agile creatures not without a rather ironic humour of their own. It intrigued him to watch those youngsters flirting with death on the edge of that precipice.

Andy Gordon was soon given other things to think about. On reaching home he found his entire establishment—the cook-boy, the house-boy, the herdsman, the store-boy, the picanin, the teamster and old M'silikadzi himself squatting in the sandy compound outside the store-hut awaiting his home-coming with obvious anxiety.

Mabfumo, the store-boy, broke the news while Andy's big Irish terrier leapt and cavorted in an ecstasy of excitement. Last night a leopard had broken into the cattle kraal, carried off a heifer calf and stampeded all the rest. Moreover, it was reported to him that four cows and a half bred steer were still missing.

Andy cursed his niggers all impartially for a useless lot of old women, and departed to his quarters for a rifle. Five head of cattle and calf represented heavy loss.

That evening found him perched high on Ngwe kopje with his gun across his knees. Except for Irish Paddy, he was alone, for or Ngwe, which means quite simply "Leopard," none of M'silikadzi's people will venture after sundown.

The sun sank down behind the distant mountains of N'danga and the bald pastures of the surrounding kopjes gleamed momentarily above their dark green tresses before the brief gloaming began to smooth out their steep configuration.

Tired after his overnight trip to the subsidiary trading depot at Ranga's, Andy failed to see the dim patch of colour on the spur beyond and above him until several seconds after it had taken silent shape. In that had light, at eighty yards, and against the neutral background of rock, it was easy to mistake the identity of that compact, broad-skulled head and yellow, fore-shortened body.

"Paddy, you villain!" he exclaimed angrily.

Andy raked the hills for weeks after that for vengeance, but the leopard kept disdainfully aloof, and without an army of beaters he could never hope to drive him out of cover in those rock citadels.

As for the baboons, they simply watched, and laughed, just as they have always watched, from their ancient ramparts.

At any moment they could have told the white man where to seek his leopard; equally, at any moment they could have delivered him over to that beast's tender mercies. All day long, as Andy lumbered about the naked baobabs, he knew the baboons were there—now up above him, now on another spur.

At night it was a different

Next moment the leopard had moved and he recognised his mistake. The long, sinuous beast turned to run, for a leopard is discreet enough—in the first instance, Andy took a snap shot. It was now or never, and the thought of his loss overcame his hunter's caution. The leopard's shoulder was nicely turned.

Nevertheless, over the report of the rifle the unmistakable whine of a ricochet was plainly audible. "Missed him," muttered Andy. Unfortunately he hadn't missed as cleanly as is healthy when a leopard makes the target. A six-inch furrow across his back brought the beast's discretion to an abrupt conclusion. He hunched himself and flew across the intervening rocks at his assailant.

Andy had a fresh shell in the chamber and plenty of nerve to wait for that last split second when a shell will deal most effectively with a charging leopard. But Paddy, that fearless, rebellious Irishman, had no faith in self-restraint, and, hackles a-bristle, his war-cry rumbling deep in his throat, he launched himself from behind his master to give battle.

That piece of impetuosity cost the dog his life. The leopard, berserk as only a wounded leopard can be, sprang high as the big Irish terrier lunged for a throat-grip, brought down a shattering forepaw, smashing and tearing in the same instant. There was a momentary flurry of yellow against the grey, cat and dog indistinguishable from each other in the swirl of bodies; then another crunching blow, a cry, and a flicked of colour as the killer slipped away into the shadows.

Over on the neighbouring heights the baboons had been watching the encounter, their black shapes dancing eerily on the skyline, their laughter coming harsh and ghoulish to the ears of Andy Gordon.

"Whish - hoo! Whish-hoo!"

Whoof! shouted the baboons.

Andy shook a fist that was red with the blood of his dying dog. Paddy's tongue came out feebly to brush the back of his master's hand.... Andy stood up.... put the muzzle of his rifle close against the raw flesh that had been an ear....

Andy raked the hills for weeks after that for vengeance, but the leopard kept disdainfully aloof, and without an army of beaters he could never hope to drive him out of cover in those rock citadels.

story. From his bed, almost under the shadow of Ngwe, Andy Gordon could hear every voice of the darkness—the thin piping voice of the steinbock in the vlei, the high, soft voices of the jackals and the grunt of a queening leopard. As he lay wakeful, the deep baying of the baboons in the kopje took on a friendlier note; their strong voices had power to soothe him like the voices of the village elders chanting the ceremonial evening song in the red circle of the firelight.

Unknown to the trader, there was a second feud against the leopard going on among the hills; the yellow assassin had killed and eaten Gweri-kweri, wistful-faced little wife of Uru, senior of the Krumvite leaders of the rock-folk.

To murder the wife of Uru meant war to the death; for Uru, despite his great age, had the reach and strength of a Carnar and a brain endowed with all the wisdom of the centuries. It had happened when the moon was three nights old; the baboon folk and the yellow slayer had met on the narrow ledge which traverses the precipitous western face of Ngwe. The baboons, punctilious always in their dealings with him, had given the leopard right-of-way by climbing the wall to a tiny second ledge above. And it would have been only right and according to precedent for the leopard to have accepted this gesture of courtesy and left them unmolested.

But the leopard was in a quarrelsome mood; he had missed his spring at a rock-rabbit earlier in the evening; moreover, the scar across his shoulders and the constant necessity for vigilance since the white man had begun scouring the countryside made him irritable and impatient of the customs of the condominium of the hills. Many times since the killing of Andy's dog he had gone out of his way to molest and threaten the tribe, as though he felt they had had something to do with that inconclusive fight. Now, as he advanced along the ledge, the scattering monkeys saw his eyes were dangerous, and barked a staccato warning. Too late! Small, fragile Gweri-kweri, heavy in whip, had missed the hand-hold for the first high swing; and as she gathered herself for a second jump that long, loose thing had leapt and struck her down. There was a scream, and the little baboon-slut lay sprawled on the ledge, her tiny, terribly human hands pressed to the wound.

The tribal instinct which may perhaps be remotest cousin to human democracy bade the baboons witness that horror to its last, worst detail, shouting deep-throated imprecations the while; bade them swarm back on to the ledge the moment that horror was ended to dabble and smear themselves in the hot blood of their kins-woman; bade them gather on Ngwe's highest pinnacle and dance like whiskered goblins under the setting moon. From that moment the entire forces of that atavistic priestcraft were ranged in sympathy with the white man's vendetta. Night after night the baboons patrolled the tall piles of Ngwe and the neighbouring hills—vociferous, vigilant, purposeful. Night after night, as the moon grew stronger, they shadowed the yellow slayer. Sometimes, when chance or strategy had given them the necessary advantage of position, the young dogs of the tribe would clamour for summary action. Then discipline answered with sledge-hammer blows dealt out with unbelievable ferocity. "Not yet!" was the order of the trimmings. Night after night they harried that leopard till he was weary of the baboon who lagged. And at last came the order to act.

That night the moon was full. As she came sailing through the kloof at sunset, a pale witch, laced among the trees, a score of those queer, fortress-like summits rang with the harsh call to action. First began the slow, perilous decoy. On the north-east shoulder of Ngwe there is a deep fault in the rock like a thin slice cut from a cake, its entrance reduced by fallen boulders to a mere cranny through which a baboon can squeeze—and perhaps a leopard. Within, the rock-walls rise sheer for about forty or fifty feet till the fractured strata offers a platform, piled high with the debris of the fracture.

The moon was sailing high in the heavens—high enough to strike deep into that natural prison—when half a dozen young baboons galloped up the lower slopes of Ngwe, hotly pursued by a thoroughly infuriated leopard. Every bound lessened their chances of escape; and the monkeys, apparently dazed with panic, failed to make use of the one available fissure that would have baffled their pursuer. Instead they checked before the entrance to the big fault, bunched as though in indecision, and then ran, whimpering with excitement and fear.

And the leopard ran in after them. From nightfall until this moment, the silvered kopjes had been plunged in a profound, uncanny silence. Not a baboon barked in the whole of Ngwe. Then, suddenly, as at a signal, pandemonium was left loose. And while those few young monkeys worked their way to safety up the chimney of the fault, the gallery above became alive with black, jeering silhouettes.

Furious leaping at the rumps of the climbers kept the leopard for several critical minutes unconscious of the significance of his position; and when, wearied of the attempt, he turned to abandon the chase, the big stone was already jammed fast across the entrance and the tribesmen responsible for its placing climbing helter-skelter out of danger.

Snarling wickedly, the leopard charged up after them. The fallen rocks weren't so steep a barrier that a creature as agile and as rage-spurred as he couldn't climb it. But the generalship of the apes had left nothing to chance: showers of stones met the onrush of the leopard, checked and driving him back to the floor of the trap—dashed but by no means beaten.

Crash! Crash! From every quarter now came stones of various sizes. A burning fragment took him in the flank. Time and again he faced about and about his teeth clashing in the direction of each new impact.

"Whah-hoo! Whah-hoo! Whah-hoo!" shouted the baboons. The leopard, badly shaken, re-

POLITICAL OUTRAGES IN INDIA

Terrorism Takes Grave Toll.

BENGAL TOPS LIST

New Delhi.
Sixty-four persons were killed, and 129 were injured, in 328 political outrages.

This is the record of terrorism in India for three years from January 1931 to February 1934, according to Mr. Hallett, Home Secretary, who made a statement in the Legislative Assembly.

20 Government officials were killed, 50 Government officials were injured, 44 others killed, and 79 injured.

Bengal tops the list with 210 political outrages, 15 officials killed, 23 officials injured, 23 others (including terrorists) killed and 48 injured.

The terrorist outrages in Bengal included:—13 murderous outrages, 13 attempts at outrages, 76 dacoities, 7 attempted dacoities, 45 robberies, 14 attempted robberies, 10 bomb throwing, 5 bomb explosions, 1 armed raid, and 1 unclassified.

An analysis of the number of political outrages in the whole of India shows:—210 in Bengal, 36 in U.P., 20 in Punjab, 17 in Bombay, 14 in Bihar and Orissa, 13 in Assam, 6 in North West Frontier, 6 in Madras, 6 in Central Provinces, 4 in Delhi, Nil in Burma.—Reuter.

THIEVES STEAL THREE CIGARS.

Prague.
Two unknown men held up Herr Maximilian Hirsch on the staircase of a block of flats at Brno, Moravia. They took a leather case from his pocket.

"No, please," begged Maximilian. His tone was so earnest that the men felt sure that the case must contain a large sum in notes. They gave him a violent push and rushed away.

Maximilian smiled. A small notecase in which he was carrying several hundred pounds was still safe in his pocket. The thieves had only taken three cigars.—Reuter.

tired into the narrow ditch of shadow that remained undisputed by the moon, moving sulkily from point to point under his assailants' searching fire of stones. Twice he made a rush at the barricade; twice he was forced back by the pitiless barrage. A sharp, well-flung chip of basalt had gashed his broad forehead, blinding him with his own blood; another stone had pulped a forehead, robbing him of the agility that was more than half his strength.

"Whah-hoo! Whoo!" The leopard flattened himself against the shadowed wall, grim and silent.

And then the moon drew up that narrow veil of shadow and started in at the sacrifice that had been prepared.

"Whah-hoo!" shouted the old men, suddenly, and in the wan, sharp-shadowed half-light of the moon there was a rush of movement and the scrape of heavy rocks being dragged towards the drop.

Down below, the leopard, robbed of his last cover, stood waiting, with tail-tip a-twitch, for the end.

Andy Gordon, waking at about mid-night sat up in his cot in the middle of the compound to listen to the din.

"Whah-hoo! Whah-hoo! Whah-hoo!"

Surely those bobbajans must be holding an Maasa up there. But beneath the abandonment of shouting he could distinguish snarling, agonised grunts.

"What happened, O Elder Brother?" he asked the old Chief. "What happened next morning, but that ancient repository of local folk-lore only blinked at the sun-blinded bulk of the crag and chuckled gently to himself.

"Don't sulk, Rho. They ate him Chief."

Which, considering the vegetation of the species, was either a misnomer or to use Andy's own expression—hellishly suggestive.

BRITAIN PLEDGES AIR POLICY
PARITY WITHOUT ANY FURTHER DELAY
NO HOPE FOR INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION
CLOSER EMPIRE LINK

London, To-day.
 Mr. Stanley Baldwin's recent assurance of the Government's determination to secure parity in the air with any country within striking distance of Great Britain, was repeated by the Air Minister, Lord Londonderry, in the House of Lords, yesterday, in reply to a speech made by Lord Mottistone, urging the remedying of the inadequacy of the air defences of the United Kingdom.

Lord Londonderry added that as it could no longer be hoped that an international convention could solve problems of Europe, the Government had decided that it could no longer delay the steps necessary to provide adequately for the air defence of the United Kingdom.

IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE AT PRESENT, HE SAID, TO GIVE THE DEFINITE NATURE OF THE CONTEMPLATED EXPANSION OF THE AIR FORCE OR THE LINES ON WHICH IT WOULD PROCEED, BUT THERE WAS NO NEED FOR APPREHENSIONS THAT THE PLANS AND ARRANGEMENTS WERE NOT FULLY UNDER WAY.

Earlier, when replying to Lord Ellbank, Lord Londonderry emphasised that the Dominions and the Government felt it incompatible with the self-Government of each, and, in the interests of all, that any attempt should be made to establish a central defence force for the Empire, but every effort was being made to link the Air Force of the Empire as closely as possible. — Reuter.

ANGLO-AMERICAN MEETING
 London, To-day.

In connection with the bilateral conversations initiated by the British Government between the chief naval powers for preliminary exchanges of views in preparation for next year's Naval Conference, a full meeting was held at the Prime Minister's room in the House of Commons between British and United States representatives yesterday.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, the Prime Minister, was accompanied by Mr. Stanley Baldwin, Sir John Simon, Sir Bolton Eyres Monsell, Vice-Admiral Little, and Mr. R. L. Craigie. The United States representatives were Ambassador Robert Bingham, Mr. Norman Davis, Rear-Admiral Leigh, and Mr. R. Ather-ton.

A further meeting will be held, but the date for the continuation of the discussions was not fixed.

NO INFORMATION
 Mr. Stanley Baldwin, replying to the request in the Commons for a statement on the general position, said that he was not prepared to give any information as to the course of the discussions, which were confidential.

He said that the Governments of France, Japan and Italy had also agreed to participate in the bilateral conversations, and added that no decision had yet been taken as to where the 1935 conference would be held.

A question was also asked whether definite demands for parity had been put forward by the Japanese Government, and Mr. Baldwin replied that no such demand had been received. — British Wireless Service.

CRAFT CAPSIZES IN GALE

Three lives were lost when fishing boat No. 4473, capsized off Cheung Chau Island while on its way to Aberdeen during the heavy gale which swept over the Colony early yesterday morning.

Nine people were in the boat, but six of them swam to Cheung-chau Island. The others, including wife, brother and sister of Leung Tai-yau, the master of the junk, were drowned.

On reaching the island the police were notified. A launch from the Water Police were despatched to the scene.

The three bodies, Lo Sze, 20-year-old female, Leung Tai-hi, 14-year-old male, and Leung Kin, 9-year-old female, were discovered on board the junk, apparently drowned in their sleep when the boat turned over.

The bodies were taken to the Public Mortuary by the Police.
